(64-bit)...Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich says the Democratic Party is incapable of electing a new president because it has been consumed by “moral insanity” since it lost the White House to Donald Trump. Speaking to Fox News host Megyn Kelly on “Megyn Kelly Today” on Tuesday, Mr. Gingrich said that instead of punishing the president and his supporters for their success, Democrats should be working to elect more Republicans. “[T]he United States had a president who in the first 100 days had a great deal of success,” he said. “And part of the reason they’ve been so depressed is because they know this is a president who has been reelected, this is a president who has been supported by every Republican since he became president, who is now going to be reelected.” Mr. Gingrich said the “sickness” of the Democratic Party is that it has lost sight of the people it represents. “They [the Democrats] don’t really see a potential president who they might be able to beat,” he said. “They don’t see a president who they might be able to beat who’s more moderate than the man they nominated in 2016, and therefore it’s easier to do nothing.” Sign up for Daily
