Massachusetts's Republican legislators have pushed a bill to expand Medicaid. Currently, 24 states and the District of Columbia participate, and have on average spent about 25% of their budgets on Medicaid. If this bill passes, Massachusetts would be responsible for most of the cost – close to 40% – starting in fiscal year 2016, and a large majority (75%) of the additional costs would be borne by the state. About half of Massachusetts's state residents would gain health insurance under this proposal. Since the introduction of the cyclosporine era, renal transplant recipients have had a reduced incidence of urinary tract infection, and the impact on urolithiasis in these patients has been diminished. However, patients on chronic cyclosporine therapy, including patients with urolithiasis, often have hematuria and elevated serum creatinine because of a reduction in creatinine clearance associated with the use of immunosuppressive therapy. The authors present a case of a renal transplant recipient with urolithiasis who was treated by extracorporeal shock wave lithotripsy and stone extraction.The Doris Duke Foundation, one of New York City's most generous philanthropic institutions, announced today its $10 million commitment in support of Co-created Health, a program bringing together doctors, technologists, social scientists and patient advocates to develop technology and methods of self-management that give voice and power to the patient. The initiative will be led by Stanford University Medical School, which has an active research program on the design, implementation, and patient adoption of technologies that help patients manage chronic conditions. MD+. the online community for patients and clinicians, will act as a coordinating organization to develop and direct the research and deployment of Co-created Health technologies. "MD+. clinicians are key to the success of Co-created Health because they are the daily users of these technologies and have the expertise to ensure that they have the potential to be effective and to avoid the pitfalls associated with technology-mediated interventions," said Doris Duke Charitable Foundation President Meg Barron. "Their unique vantage point on these interventions will enable the Foundation to support the development of the best possible solutions to these dilemmas." 3ef4e8ef8d
